As COVID-19 continues to challenge healthcare systems around the world, the CDC has issued guidelines on how healthcare providers can safely administer intravenous fluids to patients. To ensure the safety of patients and healthcare providers, Healthcare recently introduced a new product to provide high-level fluid therapy in a medical setting. Baxter Access Line I (BAL-I) is a clinical perfusion fluid management system that allows physicians to administer intravenous solutions and fluids through a single-use, shielded device. Administered through Baxter's Access line, the fluid will provide a safe and comfortable environment for the healthcare providers administering it. BAL-I is designed to be administered in a single use. Healthcare providers can insert a sterile IV catheter into the hand-held unit and initiate fluid therapy with a single touch. "With the COVID-19 pandemic, we've seen an increase in the need for hospitals to be able to give fluids safely and reliably to patients. At Healthcare, we're proud to partner with Baxter to provide safe and effective solutions for fluid therapy in the medical setting." Patrick Swann is a great storyteller, as well as a story teller. His new book, The Facts in the Case of the Brigadier's Daughter, is a mystery that is easy to set up and impossible to put down. So what exactly does the book cover? Well, we can start at the beginning: in 2011, the American Navy awarded former diplomat Donald J. Gilliland, a position at the US Naval War College. Among his tasks was overseeing the development of a new website. Now, Gilliland has a background in photography and came up with an idea: to create a site with original photographs of Americans from all over the country. After this was set in motion, the Naval War College's curators decided they wanted to invite Americans to participate in the project, so they turned to their contacts within the American Embassy in London. f3e1b3768c
