"Boomerang is a tad messy. There are chances it could grow into a good satire but it fails at that. However, it has a unique set of flavors with its experimental screenplay, some of the core beats in the song, the visuals, and the sound." A reviewer for The New Indian Express wrote, "Boomerang starts off well but soon goes down the drain. It takes time to get to know its characters and form. There are instances of the characters behaving very strangely. What I hated the most is the song's lyric sheet. It spoils the entire movie. However, Kannan does pull it up and deserves applause for taking a risk with this movie. Although the target audience might have laughed at many of the lines, it is quite mature for a comedy."
