NOTE Some schools still use ImageReady, a program originally for the Macintosh and CD Rom, as their first exposure to Photoshop, which can create layouts for print, CD Rom, and the web. ## GETTING A FIXTURE WIRED: COMPONENTS The following sections discuss the different parts of Photoshop and help you locate these parts on the screen. To better understand the components and how they interact, the "Core Concepts of the Photoshop Interface" sidebar introduces the world of layers. Photoshop is organized into a series of windows. Each window has a number of controls for manipulating images. The most important Photoshop control is a `_button_` that works as a channel for color, brightness, contrast, and so on, and a `_tab_` that lets you return to the previous window. Use the Tab key to rapidly open windows, and press Esc to close them. In most Photoshop windows, the right and left `_mouse-click buttons_` (the number pad keys on the keyboard) enable you to do many of the same things, such as move objects, change the color of an area, or crop a portion of an image. ## Adding Layers Every part of an image is actually composed of a collection of layers. In Photoshop, you can think of each layer as a physical piece of paper that sits atop others. When a layer is active (usually indicated by a tab to the layer), you can edit any part of the picture. Figure 2-2 shows a simple image with three layers (labeled 0, 1, and 2). Layers work by `_merging_` or `_blending_` various elements of the image, much like combining pieces of a jigsaw puzzle. By "blending" the elements of an image, you end up with a more complex image. You can draw a line around the area you want to convert into a layer, and then merge the new layer with the contents of the other layers. Figure 2-2: You can create a new layer by drawing a box around the part of the image you want to create a layer for. 1 --- 1 --- In addition to being used in a few of the more advanced editing features, layers also provide a way to easily duplicate and change colors or places in the image. Layers also enable you to work on a selection, which is a well-defined area of an image that enables you to replace

The mystery series-loving breast milk thief, who has cut off breastfeeding mothers' supply and fed them bottles, is back. She was arrested after she was found with multiple infant formula packets under her clothing in the Bronx. "Today at 8:12 p.m., in the vicinity of Westchester Square and City Island Avenue in the Bronx, officers from the 88th Precinct responded to a 911 call for a report of a person with a baby in a stroller," police spokesman Robert Bossin said. "En route to the location officers were informed that the mother has a prior history of breast milk thefts." About 20 minutes later, police came across a woman in the street who matched the description. She tried to flee, but officers tackled her. Police say the woman was identified as "Kelly Go." Go was charged with endangering the welfare of a child, disorderly conduct and misdemeanor child endangerment, police said. T. Rowe Price's division managing 21 mutual funds ran up an average gain of 1.7 percent in the third quarter, the highest in the industry. The funds, which held $300 million in client money, ran up their average net assets by 1.2 percent, roughly the same as the previous quarter. The largest gainers of the quarter included Oppenheimer Growth, the second quarter's No. 1 winner, up 12.3 percent. Between it and Oakmark, the two stocks took 41 percent of the money in the No. 1 and No. 2 spots. The fund's average net assets rose 1 percent, to $11.653. The fund currently holds a large, largely wealthy client base, and is therefore driven more by the moves of the stock market than the dividend yields of the holdings. Three funds - First State Large Cap Growth, Westgate Orange County Small Cap Growth and Putnam U.S. Small Cap Growth - were among the other quarterly winners. First State, the largest fund of the quarter, gained 16.3 percent. All the money in the fund goes toward Capital Group's huge stake in Blackstone, and it is not widely known by investors. Oakmark, up 10 percent, came in at No. 3. Even with a whopping drop in profits, Oakmark stayed in the top 20 funds for the quarter. The fund is hugely popular among clients, and has become the center of
