rapid screening of lipase activity. In the present study, a rapid screening procedure for lipase was developed using the Territorial DNA Chain Reaction (TDCR). The procedure is based on the polymerase chain reaction using DNA from the chromosomal DNA and recognition of the genome region of the corresponding sequence. The products of the reaction can be amplified by any extension enzyme-mediated reaction, such as cycling probe reaction (CPBR), polymerase chain reaction (PCR), or random PCR. The technique was applied to the study of lipase in Bacillus species. The results were compared with those obtained by methods that required further analyses of amplified fragments, such as analysis by polyacrylamide gel electrophoresis. The comparison was based on the time required to develop positive results and on the detection of lipase-producing strains, allowing the detection of a single colony and the identification of lipase-producing bacteria by their characteristic colony. The assay has the advantages of both rapidity and sensitivity. The procedure is based on the rapid detection of a marker gene, and it is applicable for the detection of a broad range of polymorphic bacterial species.1.
