Entrainment of circadian rhythms in laboratory-raised rats by artificial lighting: implications for the observed daily variations in drug metabolism.

1. Human metabolic activities are known to vary from day to day in a circadian rhythm. Different levels of different drugs are normally observed in different individuals at different times of day. 2. A variety of animal studies have shown circadian rhythms of drug metabolism. A common finding in such studies is that drugs can have different effects on animal metabolisms at different times of day. 3. Laboratory rats kept under different conditions, from nocturnal to diurnal, or artificial lighting conditions from 12 to 24 hours a day were given methoxamine hydrochloride (1 mg 3da54e8ca3
