It's how we've done business for over 18 years. Embodiments relate to an image pickup apparatus that performs zooming. An optical apparatus, such as an optical lens camera or a video camera, captures an image of an object by converting an image into an electrical signal and processes the image data. In particular, a digital camera, which converts an image of an object into digital data, quickly processes the image data and stores the image data in a storage unit. If the image of the object is unclear, the digital camera may perform image processing so as to output the captured image, for example, by performing a selective color or a super resolution process on the image. The digital camera may take the captured image while zooming in on a specific area of the object, in order to check the image in a high resolution. Q: grep does not work inside a program I wrote a program in c using Qt framework. I need to verify the number of lines in a file that is 300kb and if they are zero then close the file so i wrote `grep -c -s "/xxx/yyy/zzz.txt" /xxx/yyy/zzz.txt` it should print the number of lines but it prints nothing. I tried that on a command line to grep and it works but not inside the program. what's wrong? Edit
