One of the main use of keymacho is to help you to learn your favorite song. The tool will record your keyboard activity, and when you select a key, a special note generator will play a tune at the note you pressed. You can choose your favorite song from a list of 30. These song are already arranged in key for you (like C Major or G Major). The MIDI file for each song is also added to your project. The position of the notes and the timing of the sound are also arranged in key. Simplicity and Stability. You can work for several months with the app without any problems. This application is stable and has a long life (there have been several people to test and verify the app). The app is also fully customizable (you can change, among other things: the window colors, fonts, arrows, buttons, and even the entire UI). The app can handle as much as 16 songs (at the same time), and it uses about 20mb. This application is in pure Java and is the first java application that uses MIDI files. Music player with score display The player allows you to select one of the 30 song in your library, and it will play the selected song in order to learn. It also allows you to display the score of the song in order to check the exact timing of the notes. The notes are also arranged in key, so you can press a key to hear the same note in another instrument or you can press a key to hear the song in a different key, just like a piano.
