The site was founded in 2002 by Alexander Parkhomenko.Q: Allow signing out of Stack Overflow accounts in a browser? As I understand it, SO can't prevent you from having multiple accounts (at least not in a technical sense) but can prevent you from signing in to a different account, but can't prevent you from signing out, which seems to be the intent. But if I'm not signed in to an account, the link to sign out in the bottom right is broken. Is it not possible to allow users to sign out of their accounts in a browser? If not, is it planned to be so? A: The prompt to sign in after the page loads now has a button to allow users to sign out. (Reuters) - American Express Co's AXP.N quarterly revenue rose less than expected on the back of good spending by retail consumers as a global economic recovery gained momentum, but it said profit fell short of analysts' estimates and its outlook for the full year was below estimates.
