Q: Apache/Jetty - sending request and receiving response with http basic authentication I have to work with a web site that has basic http authentication. We have a java program that is sending requests to this site via http. However, we need to be able to send the requests and receive responses to/from the site directly without going through the user's browser. I have the basic http stuff working, but am having trouble taking the returned response and then sending it to the user using the java program. The example code is: /* * This example demonstrates how to send a POST request and obtain the response * in native Java. */ import java.io.ByteArrayInputStream; import java.io.InputStream; import java.io.OutputStream; import javax.servlet.ServletException; import javax.servlet.http.HttpServlet; import javax.servlet.http.HttpServletRequest; import

The use of unmanned and/or robotic vehicles is becoming more common for a number of applications, including military applications, recreational pursuits, and medical and/or media applications. However, unmanned or robotic vehicles are limited in their ability to maintain their position or position accuracy within a given area or volume due to imperfections, such as those resulting from mechanical movement components. Moreover, as the vehicles become smaller, components with even greater numbers of components and functionality become feasible, but the ability to understand the position or location of the vehicle becomes more challenging. Accordingly, improved methods and systems to determine the position and/or location of an unmanned or robotic vehicle are desirable. This invention relates to devices and methods for supplying power to an electrical load and, in particular, to devices and methods for supplying power to a crayon holder in an apparatus for addressing paper or card stock through a writing or marking instrument. The present invention relates to crayon holders and, more particularly, to a crayon holder for an erasable marker. The construction of the present invention is a modification of that disclosed in the U.S. patent to Russell et al, U.S. Pat. No. 3,850,112. The Russell et al patent discloses a crayon holder in the form of a T-shaped block of plastic which, in addition to housing the crayons, serves as a cradle for the writing or marking instrument when it is not in use. A few of the mine closures in the NT A coal mine at White Cliffs, Narweelbah Station Coal Mine, and Myall Lakes Coal Mine in South Australia. Many things came together for the success of the six NT mines. After World War II, the price of a ton of coal at Capricornia Port Coal Company's Great Artesian Basin mine rose to 35 US cents, while the price of a ton at the Port Darwin mine increased from 32 cents to US$1.25. The owners of the Capricornia mines were encouraged to upgrade their equipment to increase productivity, but the price of transport had also risen after World War II. This combination of reasons - the higher price of the coal, the increase in transport costs and new equipment that was needed for increased productivity - led to a reduction in demand for NT coal. The drop in demand led to the closure of the companies' NT mines in the late 1950s, and the removal of the miners' families to Darwin.
