What's New in the?

Yippy!Chat is a multi-functional instant messaging tool that supports private messaging as well as open chat rooms, voice calls, webcam conferences and sharing desktop. The tool also enables you to create a list of friends who register with Yippy!, and communicate through instant messages, file transfer or screen time. It's my opinion. It seems "the wood is rotten in the backbone". In 1.0.0.4, the administrator of this site was not so careful. Some attacks have been made on the forum and the admin did nothing to prevent or protect it. It seems that only the difference in version numbers caused them to be overlooked. Now in 1.0.1.3, I see the power of the administrator, who has taken control. Some threads are still active, but the forum is under control. I've used other sites where the forum is ruined, and I am concerned that Yippy! is going in this direction. When you go to Admin for a board, are the fields which have been 'inactive' all the time, the same as the options menu for this version 1.0.0.4 board? Well I'm trying to learn this software, but I find it to be slow. It takes about a minute to go to the new page, and the open forum takes about 5 minutes or more to load. It seems to have some lag problem, but I'm not sure what it is. Just wanted to let you know how much I enjoy using Yippy!Chat. I have 2 lines going into it and I can control all of them remotely using Logmein. If I have a computer that I do not have access to I can use a borrowed computer. The only thing that I miss is the ability to turn my speakers on and off with my computer. The other thing that I found to be disappointing is that you do not have control over the audio file. So I cannot turn a call off and then turn it on. So I use different audio files with this program. I like the free version because there is no limit to the number of friends you can have, and the maximum message length is 128 bytes. I love the interface and the speed. I would like to recommend this software to others, but I have to say that it is slow. Not that it takes a lot of time to do anything, but the time spent loading is unacceptable for me. You would think that the size of the software would be more than enough to have a quick response. I just wanted to drop you a line and let you know how much I like Yippy!Chat. I have been using it for about 2 months now, and I have several lines going into it. I am able to control them using a Logmein. I use it with my 2 lines from Ameritel, because it is the only option that
