PS3 Naming Contest Due to the late submission of entries for the original names for the PS3's new line of controllers, we've opened up a few more slots in the naming contest, so if you want to give your vote for what we're going to call the DualShock 3, then you need to get your entries in quickly. As the entries have already been starting to roll in and we still want to get them in before the PS3 launches on December 6th, we need your help in picking a winner. So after the jump, we're going to post a "poll" to get your thoughts, just tell us in 60 seconds or less what you'd like to see us call the DualShock 3.

Generates a list of all files and folders on your computer. As cameras for home use and portable cameras become smaller and lighter, it is more difficult to make the exposure setting of the camera since the change of exposure setting is performed at the camera main body. The number of people having a camera of this kind is more than the number of people having a film camera. Thus, in order to deal with this situation, various exposure setting buttons have been proposed. FIGS. 7 and 8 show a conventional type of exposure setting button. As shown in FIG. 7, this exposure setting button 100 is arranged in the exterior covering portion 102 of the camera main body. This exposure setting button 100 is configured to protrude from the camera main body. The camera main body includes a zoom lens system 106, and a shutter 109, which is the exposure setting button, is located in the exterior covering portion 102 of the camera main body. The zoom lens system 106 is configured to focus the image of the object at the picture plane (exposure plane) 110 on the image pickup device (not shown). The shutter 109 is a structure, made of a synthetic resin, that is located in the camera main body and is movable between a cover position (shown in the FIG. 7) and an exposure position (shown in the FIG. 8). Furthermore, as shown in FIG. 8, a manual switch 115 is arranged in the camera main body. With this conventional structure, when the camera is used, the zoom lens system 106 and the shutter 109 are operated so as to make the main frame 105 of the camera main body to be in the exposure position, and the camera main body is operated by the exposure setting button 100 and the manual switch 115 to make the main frame 105 to be in the cover position, which is set to the exposure setting mode. In this conventional structure, however, the exposure setting button 100 and the manual switch 115 are arranged separate from the camera main body, and the number of operations of these parts are increased. Therefore, it is difficult to simultaneously operate the exposure setting button 100 and the manual switch 115, and as shown in FIG. 7, the exposure setting button 100 and the manual switch 115 are arranged in the same direction. Moreover, in the conventional structure, even when the exposure setting button 100 is operated, the photosensitive surface of the image pickup device does not come into contact with the manual switch 115. Accordingly, the operation of the exposure setting button 100 does
