MAPC2MAPC or Mapc2mapc is a free and open-source map conversion tool developed by Craig Morrison and his team that is compatible with all standard Windows and Linux operating systems, including Mac OS X. Mapc2mapc Features Easy to use interface Works on any map file, including all the popular tiled map formats Supports many map file formats including ARC/Info, GeoTIFF, Esri ASCII (ESRI Grid), ESRI SHP, GeoPDF, GeoJSON, KML, MapInfo, mapc2mapc, etc. Optional (but highly recommended): Separate "left map" and "right map" maps, allowing you to browse one and convert the other to the target map format Coordinates of top left corner of map image is defined to be (0, 0) Output tiles are automatically assigned to 16 tile sides (radius of x and y sides of 160) Possible to remove source tiles from map during conversion Supports cascading of map file names in the target map format Supports copying multiple source map files in a folder Converts all visible layers (including the ground, vegetation, etc.) Can maintain a tree structure of map files Navigation icons can be turned on and off with a single button click Mapc2mapc comes with a sophisticated compiler that compiles image tiles to bitmap (raster) files. The result maps are of good quality, even if the source map is very large. They can be viewed in Adobe Photoshop, Adobe Illustrator, ArcGIS or other photo editing software. They can also be viewed in a GIS software like ArcView or ArcGIS. 3e33713323
