If you aren't familiar with citation styles, or you want to learn a bit more about them, you can find more information in You May Ask Yourself 3rd Edition.pdf[Factors in total hip arthroplasty. Apropos of 165 cases]. The authors present 165 hips that were operated on using an endoprosthesis. The population was composed of a series of 79 men and 76 women, the average age being 50 years. The main indication was coxarthrosis. The authors point out the influence of the following factors on the success of the operation: the site of the sprain, the recovery period after this episode, the relationship with the femur, the quality of the cartilage and the true shape of the cup. The results are assessed on the basis of clinical and radiological examinations, with particular attention being paid to hip function by means of the Merle d'Aubigné classification. On average, the patients had been operated on for 33 months, and their pain and mobility improved. Slight instability was noted in 12.2% of the cases, and 13% developed post-traumatic osteoarthritis.
