Corel Draw As I said, both Photoshop and Illustrator have specific limitations. Corel Draw, on the other hand, is a general-purpose raster graphics application. It is not as strong an application in terms of manipulation of raster images as Photoshop or Illustrator, and it does not have any vector features. However, Corel Draw is a good image-editing solution for those who need to edit raster images.

Q: Determine degree of extension field Let F be a field of order 5 and L be a subfield of F of order 3. I want to find the degree of the extension L/F . If we had subfields K and L of F , I know I can write $\dim_F(L/K)$ as follows: $\dim_F(L/K) = \dim_F(F/K) - \dim_F(F/L)$ But what to do when I'm working with subfields of a field of different order, such as the above situation? I'm pretty sure there's something similar to $\dim_F(F/K)$, but I'm not sure how to use it. A: The short answer is that the extension $F \subseteq L$ is always a degree $[F:F]$ extension, where $[F:F]$ is the degree of the field F over F . We have $[F:F] = [L:F] \cdot [F:F] = [L:F] = (3) \cdot 5 = 15$. How to Get Out of a Diaper Bum Thoughts from a white mom of biracial children My hands can no longer abide the feel of another person, not even the soft comfort of my own infant. I am weak and my self-confidence is wavering. My body aches to see a person else's child (you know, the ones who've had more than a day of sleep). I need to see a person else's child. I crave — desperately, and I know it's irrational — the sweet comfort of a hands-on, eyes-on baby. Of an eager, forgiving child. I need to be held by a parent, or by a family member. I need someone to take care of me. There is a woman next to me. She's a petite twentysomething, cozily rocking a full-term pregnancy. She's a study in motherly calm. Her children prattle around her, and she talks to them so softly and pleasantly that they actually want to come and sit on
