This software is a utility designed specifically for Yahoo! Widget Engine. This gadget adds a standard text editing area in the user's browser for taking notes, creating to-do lists, marking significant events, and setting reminders when working on the computer. Although Yahoo! Widget Engine was discontinued a while back, users can still download and install this software framework (along with widgets designed for it) from Softpedia since it's functional. After quickly integrating the widget with the Yahoo! Widget Engine dock, the application shows a separate window that contains the word processing area, which resembles a real-life clipboard. It's possible to type, cut, copy and paste text in this section, as well as to create and delete selections. There is no limit set to the amount of text that can be entered. However, users should be aware that there's no saving or exporting option implemented by the developer, and the text shall be lost after exiting. Therefore, it's necessary to copy the information and paste it into an actual text editing program to save the document for safekeeping. There are no customization settings provided by Desktop Clipboard, such as background and text colors, or font style or size. The only configuration options available are supplied by Yahoo! Widget Engine, where it's possible to set the window on top or below any other opened panels, disregard mouse dragging and other events, and adjust the opacity level. A Gram-positive, spore-forming bacterium isolated from volcanic sediments in Auvergne (France), was found to have a great capacity to produce beta-galactosidase, at higher levels than all the strains tested so far. After an initial screening by PAGE, the activity of a crude extract of the strain was determined to be 23.6 units/mL. The purified beta-galactosidase had a molecular weight of 105 kDa, an isoelectric point of 4.7, and an optimum pH at 3.2. The enzyme showed a relative molecular mass of 42 kDa, as determined by size-exclusion chromatography, and a molar extinction coefficient of 43 700 at 280 nm. The enzyme hydrolysed a variety of beta-glycosides, but not alpha-galactosides. This suggests that Sporosarcina sp. is a new source of beta-galactosidase.Women in
