The core gameplay includes the manipulation of players within the environment around them, changing formation shape, speed, acceleration, positioning and mechanics, attributes which have been largely unchanged within the franchise since 2010. The movement of players on the pitch will affect how other players move, with this in turn affecting the play of other players in their immediate vicinity, a feature called "field control," which demonstrates the tangible connection between player behaviour and the natural state of the pitch. With the field control ability, players can manipulate the natural state of the pitch, ensuring that the ball stays in play and other players get a good shot on goal. Using the data from real-life action in real-time, the game is able to offer more realistic and in-depth football behaviour. Because of this, the game is able to deliver the highest-fidelity football simulation on any gaming platform. These two features, alongside a revolutionary, adaptive artificial intelligence system, is what allows the game to deliver on a whole new level of on-pitch intelligence and connectivity, while also providing an even more engaging and realistic football experience. The gameplay is further enhanced by the introduction of a number of new "Real Player Motion Capture" modes, enabling players to play as and against any player, including the use of pre-match and post-match replays of opponents, by providing top-class in-game commentary via Chris Kamrani. These Real Player Motion Capture modes have been used to produce key movements and actions of real-life professionals, such as the impact of a punch, a goalkeeper's catch, a throw-in and a free-kick, as well as gestures and actions unseen in the press of a match. "Our biggest challenge was to implement FIFA's world-class physics engine and technology into a new era of football gaming on all platforms," said Aaron McHardy, the game's Director of Digital. "We had to develop the infrastructure and infrastructure for this groundbreaking user experience, plus add in the latest innovations in motion capture to create this new generation of FIFA gameplay. "It was challenging to apply the latest generation of motion capture technology in to a game with an established history but we did it, and the results are spectacular. We built a new engine from the ground up and began developing a completely new, PS4-specific gameplay system from the start of development. We were excited to reveal

For example, Why was Maryam arrested? Who was arrested? Why did they arrest her? Why were they arrested? A: One option is because. Because of the fact that her father is the President, she was arrested. Note that the word because can be used for both factual and causal/discussing reasons, in your examples. I would phrase the sentence this way: Why was Maryam arrested? Why was she arrested? Why was she arrested? Another option is what for. "Why was she arrested?" "It was what for." The reason could be for, e.g., fraud bc9d6d6daa

The serum level of prolactin was markedly increased and the secretion of this hormone was stimulated by nicotine in a concentration dependent manner. The nicotine stimulated prolactin secretion was blocked by atropine and hexamethonium, suggesting the involvement of the cholinergic receptors and the release of the neurotransmitter from the hypothalamus. The nicotine induced PRL release was not significantly altered by pentobarbital anesthesia or decapitation. Nicotine increased the plasma level of catecholamines in the pituitary gland.
