SINGAPORE - Tong Siang Eng was born with congenital hydrocephalus, a condition that causes the brain to swell. At 14 months of age, Mr Tong's brain began to swell and he required emergency surgery to drain cerebrospinal fluid from his brain. However, the doctors were unable to drain all of the fluid, and they had to leave him with only a tiny hole in the skull. Since then, he has been under medical care for the rest of his life. He was also sent to live in a children's home between 2005 and 2010, at a time when he was believed to be about 15. Last year, he received a letter from the Ministry of Social and Family Development (MSF) officially informing him that he was eligible for a social benefit called the Ang Mo Kio Home's Child Care and Companion Care. But he was not allowed to stay at the Ang Mo Kio Home permanently, because he was still under the age of 21, when eligibility for the scheme ends. He was offered to work at a McDonald's outlet in Ang Mo Kio, but turned it down. He has since moved in with his mother. At a recent clinic visit, Dr Gwee Kian Yee, chief of the neurosurgery unit at the National Neuroscience Institute (NNI), said: "There has been a long wait in applying for social benefits. "As time went on, he needed better adjustments, and he can't stand at table or squat. "He is never more than 50 per cent mobile." Dr Gwee said that Mr Tong, now aged 22, has epilepsy and developmental delays, and is easily distracted. He needs a wheelchair and another caregiver to accompany him at all times. Dr Gwee added that as Mr Tong grows older, his condition may worsen. "He needs to be wheelchair-bound, or he will be unable to do daily activities," she added. "Given his medical condition, he needs to be seen regularly, because we can't leave him by himself. "He can't handle the stresses of everyday life." Ms Ang said that despite Mr Tong's condition, he has managed to build a happy life. "When he was younger, he always wanted to go out, to play with friends. "He loved going to see Mr Goh's

Q: Retrieving Object Value While Allowing for Keys What I am trying to do is retrieve a value of a particular key within an object, but when I do it, it will only retrieve the value for the last key stored within the object. var coords = [{dist:12.30, left:40, top:10}, {dist:13.30, left:20, top:50}, {dist:25.30, left:60, top:40}, {dist:41.30,

var coords = [{dist:12.30, left:40, top:10}, {dist:13.30, left:20, top:50}, {dist:25.30, left:60, top:40}, {dist:41.30, left:10, top:5}, {dist:3.30, left:0, top:0}]; coords.forEach(function (e, i) { coords[i] = {...coords[i],...e }; }); console.log(JSON.stringify(coords));
