* Read the booklet that comes with your Photoshop software. This information can help you learn how to use Photoshop. 2. Choose a file. Choose a file to open that meets the minimum requirements of Photoshop's file format. Generally, this format is TIFF (using one of the camera-based formats such as JPEG/JPEG Efex Pro, TIFF/EP, TIFF/EPS, and TIFF/EPX) or Photoshop's native format (see Figure 4-3). 3. Open the file. When you click the Open button or the OK button to open the file, you actually click the thumbnail image for the file so that Photoshop opens the file to display the image. 4. Make the file editable. If you first want to work on just the photo (as opposed to adding text or drawing), first choose Edit→In Camera Raw. (Choose Edit→In Camera Raw to open the Camera Raw dialog box.) If the file already has a composite color space, you can leave the color space set to sRGB. Otherwise, click the Adobe RGB swatch and then choose Adobe RGB (1998) from the Color Settings area. FIGURE 4-3: Choosing a file format and opening the file for editing. Make sure that the spot where you intend to add text is selected first. To do so, choose Select→Selection and then Shift+click (Ctrl+click on the Mac) the spot where you want the text to appear. * You can also add text to a file, selecting Edit→Text and making your marks (see Chapter 3) and then choosing Edit→Text→Add to add it. * If you want to add a trace over an existing image, first select the spot you want to follow (before opening the file) to indicate where you intend to add your text by choosing Select→Selection and then Shift+click (Ctrl+click on the Mac) the spot where you want the text to appear. ## Adjusting a Photo's Exposure, Contrast, and Brightness When you open a photo, the camera captures all of the available light and records it in the file. If the light intensity is fairly low, you may have to adjust the `_exposure_` (intensity) of the image so that it doesn't look too dark or light. With a different brightness setting, you can

The below list of Photoshop alternatives is not comprehensive. We hope you find it useful when comparing several tools for your specific needs. Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin sought to defuse tensions between President Trump and Sen. Bob Corker Robert (Bob) Phillips CorkerHas Congress captured Russia policy? Tennessee primary battle turns nasty for Republicans Cheney clashes with Trump MORE (R-Tenn.) on Friday, telling reporters that the president was aware of Corker's criticisms in advance and still supported him. "I think the president's been a little surprised by some of this," Mnuchin said, according to the Associated Press. ADVERTISEMENT "He knows the effect that Senator Corker has in the world and in the country and that's been an important thing." Mnuchin also said Trump was "not at all" considering forcing out Corker, who has been critical of the president. "I don't think there's any talk about that at all," he said. Earlier in the week, Mnuchin rebuked Corker's comment that Trump was "not necessarily" equipped to be president. "I think that Senator Corker was speaking more in the context of what he thinks the president's character is," Mnuchin said on ABC's "This Week." Corker's comments, which came in response to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's confirmation of Trump's pick to be ambassador to NATO, sparked concerns that Corker's colleagues would challenge his term in the Senate. He declined to go into specifics regarding what he meant by his comments, saying he would leave it up to the Senate to decide on his fate, according to the Tennessean. "I would say this: I hope that the Senate will elect to keep me, and I hope the Senate will elect to elect new leadership," he said. But Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-Ky.) said there would be a vote when he returns from the Fourth of July recess. "I look forward to the days ahead and getting to know our senators," McConnell said in a statement. "I've been and am very concerned that the president and the vice president have not been hosting events here in Kentucky to meet with local and state elected officials," he added./* * Copyright © MyCollab * * This program is free software: you can redistribute it and/or modify * it under the terms of the GNU Affero General Public License as published by * the Free Software Foundation, either version 3 of the License, or * (at your option) any later version. * *
