They start out like this: "If you have a hunting license, you should also have a background check," a proposal in the General Assembly's version of the state budget says. Republicans and Democrats agree that the background check system is too easily abused by criminals, but they disagree on how much the checks should check.

Republicans support what is known as an instant check — the instant a buyer gets a handgun. Democrats want a system of instant checks, combined with a delay before the sale. A delay would let someone who was considering the purchase "cool off." The legislators write, "Someone who can afford to buy a gun should not be allowed to do so instantaneously, and someone whose mental health could be affected by the presence of a gun in his or her home should be allowed to wait until their mental health is settled." Their proposal would allow background checks, only if the gun owner would wait a number of days before selling the gun. The amount of time would vary depending on how much money the buyer has. For example, if you have $1,500 to spend, the background check would take 14 days. If you're buying the gun 1cdb36666

For years, I was one of those people who went to church sporadically and occasionally didn't think much about it, though I sometimes wondered what my grandparents would think. But one Sunday, I found myself in the choir. "Oh my God, this is awesome," I thought. My confidence gradually grew and I began to enjoy the music and the friendship. At first it was a one-hour commitment, but over time, my involvement became more frequent. I've learned a lot about myself since then. I've always believed that the best way to live a good and happy life is to practice godliness; and I've learned that the best way to practice godliness is to attend church. I believe that each of us has an inner light, which is God's spirit, and it can be rekindled and refined. Through prayer, we can ask for guidance, direction and inspiration. Now I go three times a week and have become pretty serious about attending. Every time I go, I feel a little more relaxed, and I'm able to focus on more than the tasks at hand. I usually attend a smaller church, the kind of church where they worship God as God intended and not necessarily as some perceived image. Sometimes they sing an old gospel tune that makes me think of the harmonies in America. It's a special kind of worship music that speaks to my soul. It touches my heart in a way that encourages me to serve in this world. It's also fun. I sing a little bit. I like going to the church where my daughter attends kindergarten. There are a few things about this church that make me feel good, and I am hoping that one day my kids will have the same experience. You don't have to go to a fancy place to pray. My kids and I take a 10-minute walk to a place we like to go. My husband and I go to a coffee shop at the end of the road. The music is nice and the atmosphere
