A diversity of normal human NK cells. Natural killer (NK) cells constitute a small subset of lymphocytes involved in the immune response to viral infections and tumors and in fetal-maternal recognition. We have analyzed the distribution and function of NK cells in normal human peripheral blood, bone marrow, and cord blood. In peripheral blood, NK cells constitute up to 4% of all circulating lymphocytes. The majority of NK cells express CD56 and are CD16-/low CD3-/low. Among the CD56+ subsets, CD16- NK cells represent the majority. The majority of NK cells in bone marrow are CD56+CD16+ cells. In these hematopoietic tissues, CD56+CD16+ cells constitute less than 3% of all lymphocytes, and these NK cells lack surface CD3 and CD16. Interestingly, cytotoxic activity of bone marrow NK cells is restricted to CD16- NK cells. The CD56+ NK cells in fetal blood express CD56 and CD16 and mediate more lytic activity than their adult counterparts. Cord blood CD16+/low NK cells express low levels of CD16 and CD56 and lack surface CD3 and CD16. They exhibit somewhat lower levels of cytotoxicity than adult CD16-/low NK cells. These results indicate that, in contrast to T cells, the ontogeny of NK cells is not a continuous process and that the distribution of NK cells may be quite different in various hematopoietic organs. These results also indicate that CD16 expression may be important for immunoregulation and suggest that selective activation of CD16+/low NK cells could be useful in immunotherapy of disease.

"governing" is in effect during the strike. The very fact that a decree may end a strike and restore the status quo ante, without proof of wrong-doing, is the basis for the rule expressed in National Labor Relations Board v. New England Coal & Coke Co., 245 F.2d 477 (1957), that a company is not the employer of those employees whom it has superseded. We hold that this is also the fact where a decree has merely "restored" the position of the parties to the "status quo," they having acquiesced in the provisions of the decree, for a period of years, with regard to their union and relations with one another. 15 We do not need to say anything about the general proposition that an employer is free to contract with

Q: when using lodash `_.merge` `sortList` unneeded code is added to the returned object I'm trying to implement a recursive method to sort an array of objects alphabetically. This works fine, however when using lodash `_.merge`, in the returned object the `sortOrder` property is added automatically. // function to sort a list alphabetically var sortList = (function (arr, sortOrder) { if (arr.length
