Q: Use Maven 2 with Eclipse (SDT?) Is there a way to integrate Maven2 with Eclipse SDT (Subversion)? I want to commit my svn changes directly in maven2 repo. Thank you. A: It's possible to integrate Maven directly into Eclipse, but you have to ask for its support. I'm guessing that is exactly what you're after. The only other way I know to do this is to use the Subclipse plugin for Eclipse, which works with Subversion. A: With the latest version of Maven you can use the Eclipse Maven Integration Plugin. This plugin brings Maven's runtime behaviour in the Eclipse IDE. This will give you the ability to create Maven projects from the Eclipse wizard, do a full Maven build or even use your Maven tags and version numbers like eclipse project names. If you are using the Hibernate, Spring or IntelliJ IDEA plugins it will also provide integration in their respective Eclipse IDE's. Eclipse Plugin: A: There is no plugin for Maven and Subclipse integration, but there is an open feature request on the Eclipse tracker: M2Eclipse Enhancement - Integration with Eclipse Subclipse and check out which version of Subclipse does the plugin support. The Subclipse plugin for Eclipse can be downloaded here: A putative internal control in the biosynthesis of polyphenolic compounds in bitter geranium (Paulownia tomentosa) seeds. A strict correlation between the accumulation of polyphenolic compounds and the presence of the polyketide synthase PKS 4 genes in the seedlings of Paulownia tomentosa suggests that polyphenolic compounds may be synthesized by the same gene cluster as the alkaloids, a result that was also observed in the pericarp of P. fortunei. To determine whether PKS 4 genes play any regulatory roles in the biosynthesis of polyphenolic compounds in the bitter geranium seedlings, we compared the expression levels of PKS 4 genes in bitter geranium (PG) and weak geranium (WG) seeds, which differ in their capacity to accumulate polyphenolic compounds in both cell walls and cytoplasm. The amounts

Q: Save Settings with Python: How to use settings.DATABASE_URI? I'm trying to save my settings by using a RestAPI. my code looks like this `@override void initState() { // TODO: implement initState super.initState(); _loadDB(); } void _saveDB(){ setState(() { settings.set(DatabaseHelper().DBURI,result[1][0]); print(result[1][0]); print(DatabaseHelper().DBURI); }); }` This is my model class `DatabaseHelper { DatabaseHelper({Key key}) : _databaseKey = key; String get databaseKey { return _databaseKey; } Database db = await DatabaseProvider.instance.getDatabase(databaseKey: _databaseKey); String DBURI = '$_databaseKey:server/database'; Future get databaseUrl async { return DBURI; } }` My problem is, that settings.set() always seems to be empty and so i can't actually save anything in my settings. Is the process correct and does anyone know what I'm doing wrong? A: I am afraid what you do is incorrect because you use the instance method (the answer is in the documentation) So you should use the static method `DatabaseHelper().setDBURI(result[1][0]);` or just `settings.set(DatabaseHelper.DBURI, result[1][0]);` Q: FFmpeg usage for capturing screen I need to capture screen. I have found this code that works `ffmpeg -f avfoundation -i "screen://" -f movie -t 5 -r`
