If your computer is capable of playing MP3s, plug in your favorite headphones and listen to the audio version of your favorite Horsecore songs. Horsecore had the distinction of being the first hardcore band to be featured on the cover of New Noise Magazine. This led to some speculation as to just how hard their music was, with many wondering whether they were just a gimmick. Horsecore's debut album, Horsecore, helps to dispel those rumors. The music is as hard as it is loud, with a "Do This, Not That" mentality; sacrificing melody for volume.

Horsecore 2008 62

horsecore has its origins in the comedic side of thrash. it's basically a low-budget, over-the-top concept. like the film horrible bosses, it's a fun, but low-budget comedy with three guys who have an attitude but are treated poorly. there's no real plot to the story except that they're just over-the-top and just intend to sound extreme. horsecore was the brainchild of guitarist and vocalist steve rizzo. he'd been hanging out at a rehearsal studio when several bands rehearsing there were making him laugh. rizzo wanted to take a few tracks and see if he could get a laugh out of it. when dead horse played their first concert in '88, they pulled off a rousing performance. as they were packing up, rizzo realized the only thing that might get a laugh was the lyrics. steve rizzo did a lot of writing for dead horse in '88. after he went to college, he found an obscure comic he'd found and used it as a background for some riffs he wrote. he would work on them for days and when he'd change them, he would do a bad job of explaining things to the other members. being born in '66, he grew up with many classics of rock and roll and felt his natural inclination was towards humor. this was also a time when bands would start drawing rock comic books that were an attempt to endear the band to the kids. like many bands, it was dead horse's second effort that they feel was like a debut album. however, it wasn't the actual debut because they had played their first show in '88. to make a long story short, dead horse wrote the songs in '88, recorded a demo, then played a lot of their first show in '88 and got signed by headhunter. 5ec8ef588b
