1. use the new creative cloud app store and simply grab the new updates, versions, or whatever you want. there are a bunch of updates ready to go, especially for creative cloud 2018, most of which are just bug fixes and the updates are the same update as the download link. the only thing to watch for is if you plan to install the update from an external location, make sure you have enough storage to hold it. you might also want to check the mac app store for updates as well. i know that a lot of people do because they dont have that option, but i find it to be the same update. 2. if you are using the new creative cloud app store, you can search for all the latest updates and grab them all at once. from the app store, just search for the file you want and click update all, then install. you can also go to the "app store" tab on the top right and there is a list of updates there as well. there are a few updates ready to go, but you still have to install them. this requires a bit more work but is still easy to do, especially if you have a lot of updates. 3. if you have the adobe creative cloud app on your computer already, it will prompt you to update. or, if you have a signed in account, you can update in the app. if not, you can still update in the cloud app by going to the updates tab on the top right and choosing to install from there. again, its easy and you can grab a bunch of updates at once.
